2000-2001 First Run Broadcast Show Descriptions

Galapagos: Fernandina Island (2185)

June 23-24, 2001

Six hundred miles due west of Ecuador in the Pacific Ocean, Jack and his daughter Kathaleen continue their adventures on the Galapagos Islands. On Fernandina, Jack investigates the Galapagos penguin population while Kathaleen swims with the world's only marine iguanas.

Jumbeli Animal Rescue Center (2186)

June 30-July 1, 2001

Because Ecuador doesn't have the money to fund wildlife conservation programs, private landowners, like Joaquin Orrantia, have stepped forward to offer assistance. Jack and Kathaleen visit Joaquin's massive farm outside Guayaquil where he provides a haven for 45 species of animals native to Ecuador, including endangered spectacled bears, tapirs and great green macaws.

EPISODE OUTLINE
SHOW 350
BROADCAST WEEK: 4/2/01
Puerto Rican Parrot (2 Parts) / Covert Cave

Segment One: Host Josh Bryant introduces the program.

Segment Two: U.S. Fish & Wildlife biologists are trying to save the Puerto Rican parrot from extinction. First we'll see the program to breed the birds in captivity, while studying them for possible clues to their survival.

Segment Three: In the next phase, the biologists hike deep into the forest, carrying specially chosen birds. They are kept in cages for several weeks to become acclimated to the environment. Then they are finally released into the wild.

Segment Four: Tipped off by spelunkers, officers in Indiana venture deep into a cave and find a mysterious cache of equipment left by someone. After uncovering this stockpile of concrete sacks, blasting caps, wires and tools, the officers return to the surface to set up surveillance. Their chief concern is the protection of the population of bats.

Segment Five: Josh Bryant closes the show and offers instruction on how to learn more about the stories viewed in this episode.

EPISODE OUTLINE
SHOW 353

BROADCAST WEEK: 4/23/01
Protecting The Jaguar, An Old U.S. Resident
Who Appears To Be Coming Home

Segment One: Host Josh Bryant introduces the program.

Segment Two: The jaguar, the largest big cat in the Americas and third only to the tiger and lion in the world, once roamed from Louisiana to California, as well as Central and South America. But hunters, eager for its handsome pelt, or ranchers trying to protect their livestock, drove the jaguar south of the Mexican border. Of late, however, there have been a number of sightings that indicate jaguars are migrating north again. But this time, the great cat has friends, determined to help it survive.

Segment Three: Amazingly, a mountain lion hunter, not only trees a jaguar in Arizona, but brings back the evidence of the sighting on videotape. A research effort begins to learn how to measure and collect jaguar tracks, to determine the big cat's migration corridors and ultimately how to protect him.

Segment Four: Research determines that there is a strong breeding population of jaguars in Mexico, about 140 miles south of the U.S. border, though most are in the Yucatan rainforest. The alliances formed to protect the jaguar determine one of the best ways to facilitate the animal's reintroduction to the States is to help protect and preserve the species in Mexico. We'll follow some Mexican conservationists who are capturing a jaguar and fitting it with a radio collar for tracking.

EPISODE OUTLINE
SHOW 356
BROADCAST WEEK: 4/30/01
Kruger National Park

Segment One: Host Josh Bryant introduces the program.

Segment Two: Kruger is the oldest and largest national park in South Africa and home to most of that continent's major plain's animals and carnivores. It's a thrilling adventure for visitors to see and a major responsibility for the park officers assigned to protect the wildlife and maintain public safety.

Segment Three: The conservation officers at Kruger face an ongoing threat to the park's wildlife, the poacher. These are desperate characters often willing to shoot an officer rather than face arrest. And, the officers are often outnumbered and facing superior weapons. That makes patrolling the park and engaging the poachers that invade it a most hazardous task.

Segment Four: It takes a lot of money and manpower to handle Kruger Park's conservation programs and defend the wildlife against poachers. To provide that funding, the park vigorously promotes ecotourism, encouraging traffic to the park. That, in turn, creates more challenges for the conservation officers: protecting the tourists from the animals, the animals from the tourists, and cleaning up the messes that human beings tend to leave around.

Segment Five: Host Josh Bryant recaps the program and gives instructions to viewers in how to obtain details on the content.

EPISODE OUTLINE
SHOW 357

BROADCAST WEEK: 5/7/01- 5/14/01

Teton Moose Study, Buffalo Capture, All Terrain Vehicle Training

Segment One: Host Josh Bryant introduces the program.

Segment Two: In the Greater Yellowstone area, scientists are conducting a moose study to see if there is a problem with brucellosis, a disease that can spread to domestic cattle. At the same time, they're trying to determine if predators, grizzlies and wolves introduced into the area, have had an adverse effect on the moose population.

Segment Three: The cape buffalo, always extremely dangerous to hunters, now presents an even greater danger, as a host of bovine tuberculosis. This disease can be spread from the carcass of a buffalo to prey animals, vultures, even humans. In an effort to create healthy populations, Mpumalanga Park Rangers are capturing and relocating pregnant buffalo to disease-free areas so their calves can be born and remain healthy.

Segment Four: Poachers were quick to start using the new all-terrain vehicles to penetrate wilderness areas and outrun and outflank conservation officers. In a special ATV tactical training school in Colorado, officers from fish and game departments and the Forest Service are learning how to adapt these rugged, off-highway vehicles to the law enforcement business.

Segment Five: Host Josh Bryant recaps the program and gives instructions to viewers in how to obtain details on the content.

EPISODE OUTLINE
SHOW 359

BROADCAST WEEK: 5/21/01

Antelope Capture/Sandhill Crane-Duck Banding/Radio Room

Segment One: Host Josh Bryant introduces the program.

Segment Two: The American pronghorn antelope isn't really an antelope and isn't closely related to any other hoofed or horned animal. But this wily plains animal is the fastest mammal in America with speeds up to 60 miles per hour. Hunting once seriously threatened pronghorns, but conservation has increased populations to more than 600,000, so that in states like Wyoming you're likely to see many from the road. A darting and collaring study is presently being conducted at Warren Air Force Base in Cheyenne, to determine pronghorn migration.

Segment Three: The mallard duck and the sandhill crane come from quite different bird families, and different destinies too. Mallards are the most abundant duck in the world and the only question is how many hunting licenses should be sold to the public. The sandhill's future, however, is not quite that sure, and scientists are carefully monitoring the flocks and finding ways to protect them. But both are alike in being migratory water birds and using the great flyways to travel north and south. And both are the subject of studies to ensure their continued survival and well-being.

Segment Four: In Arizona, officers are finding support through 2-way radios and a central radio "room" in Phoenix. Here can be found some ready partners, to link the caller to other nearby officers, to check licenses and criminal records of offenders and perform other tasks at lightning-fast speed. It's a real comfort to people with a tough job in the field.

Segment Five: Host Josh Bryant recaps the program and gives instructions to viewers in how to obtain details on the content.

EPISODE OUTLINE
SHOW 354
BROADCAST WEEK: 5/28/01
Rhino Capture/Animal Rehab/Wildland Rehab

Segment One: Host Josh Bryant introduces the program.

Segment Two: Uneasy lies the head of any animal that has parts of great interest to humans. A prime example is the rhino, whose horn is considered in some parts of the world to have great medicinal value. This has created a market demand that has driven poachers to slay these animals in tragic numbers. It would be a shame if the third largest land animal in the world were lost to us. But there are serious efforts to preserve the rhino. One of these is taking place in South Africa, where conservation officers use special methods to monitor rhinos and keep dangerous predators away.

Segment Three: When a catastrophic forest fire occurs, there are bound to be a lot of burned and injured animals in the area and a considerable number of orphans. What do you do with these survivors? We'll go to New Mexico where a wildlife veterinarian, working with New Mexico Game & Fish, takes care of burned animals and orphans. The burns are treated and the patients are housed until they are healed. In the case of orphans, they are kept and cared for until they are mature enough to fend for themselves in the wild.

Segment Four: The land can survive forest fires. It always has. But when there's a fire, the earth is left vulnerable to weather. And if we don't do something, we can have serious problems that are worse than the fire themselves. So, we must take steps to see that the soil, once held in place by trees and brush, doesn't wash away by rain or blow away by wind.

Nuisance Bear / Karst Topography / Outdoor Women

Segment One: Host Josh Bryant introduces the program.

Segment Two: By feeding bears in state or national parks, visitors create a problem, the nuisance bear. Encouraged by this treatment, bears press ever closer to human habitation, until they constitute a menace. In Colorado, one nuisance bear finally had to be dealt with by conservation officers.

Segment Three: Karst topography is formed when water percolates through limestone, shaping chambers and passageways. In Puerto Rico the Karst holds unique endemic species and is a significant source of the island's water supply.

Segment Four: Traditionally, a woman who becomes an outdoors person, learned the skills of the outdoors from her father or husband. But, in today's world, many men aren't outdoorsmen and many women are single or even single mothers. In New Mexico, the Becoming an Outdoors Woman program provides the instruction to let women enjoy the great outdoors.

EPISODE OUTLINE
SHOW 360
BROADCAST WEEK: 6/11/01
Cougar Study/Patrolling Lake Erie/Ranch Management

Segment One: Host Josh Bryant introduces the program.

Segment Two: The comeback of the mountain lion or cougar in much of his old range has raised some questions: Is the big cat a serious threat to humans, their pets and to livestock? How about deer, elk and sheep? In Montana, researchers have set up a 330 square mile test site populated with radio collared cougars. Over a ten year period, they'll monitor the population during non-hunting and hunting periods. As a result of this test, the scientists hope to have more than guesses to the key questions.

Segment Three: Lake Erie, fourth largest of the Great Lakes, extends from Toledo to Buffalo. Some years ago, it had an unfortunate reputation for pollution. But through the efforts of conservation groups and the introduction of new fish species, Lake Erie is one of the cleanest around and a productive fishery. The U.S. and Canada, working together, are maintaining this success story through on-going patrolling of the waters, ensuring that fishing laws are strictly enforced. This protects the harvests of commercial fishermen and the fun for sportsmen.

Segment Four The cowpokes of the Old West would be disappointed to know that cattle ranching just doesn't seem to work anymore as a money-making proposition. Some ranchers have started subdividing their land for housing, a threat to the habitat that supports animal life. But in Colorado and other Western states, Fish & Game Departments come in and analyze the land and make suggestions for increasing game and fish populations. The ranchers can then make income from hunting and fishing licenses to offset declining income and postpone subdividing.

Segment Five: Host Josh Bryant recaps the program and gives instructions to viewers in how to obtain details on the content.

Commercial Limits Certification

I, Gene Greenberg, General Manager of television station KVBC, Channel 3, Las Vegas, Nevada, hereby certify, for the period from April 1, 2001 through June 30, 2001, that

- 1) I am familiar with the commercial limits imposed by s 73.760 of the FCC's rules (providing that programs originally produced and broadcast primarily for an audience of children aged 12 and under contain no more than 10 ½ minutes of commercials per hour on weekends and no more than 12 minutes of commercial per hour on weekdays).
- 2) The certification of NBC network for the programming it supplied for airing on KVBC is attached. KVBC did not add commercial material within the network-supplied programs that would have caused KVBC to exceed the FCC's commercial limits.
- 3) There was no instance where KVBC exceeded the commercial limits for the above programs as aired.
